technologies in the security and military fields” said His Excellency, Minister Marwan Charbel in opening the press conference.

Charbel considered that holding the SMES show for the second time in Lebanon reinstates the country’s prestigious role in this sector in the region. He mentioned that this exhibition derives its security features from new technologies devised to provide protection, and contribute to limiting crimes and terrorists attacks, being also critical to preserve stability and country development.

“The sophisticated equipments to be featured in SMES 2011 will allow security forces to adopt a scientific approach, with the ability to link security and Human rights” said Charbel “The subjects of the show encompass national security, border security, Installations Security and combating terrorism. These are extremely important in view of the nature of the risks surrounding Lebanon, causing us to pay highly in the fight against terrorism.”

“As stated in the Ministerial Statement, the government pledges to provide security institutions needs, through an equipping plan that aims to achieve security stability, as well as fighting terrorism, crime and vandalism” said Charbel

His Excellency praised the Institute for the Near East and Gulf Military Analysis - INEGMA and acknowledged the security and defense companies that open the way to scientific progress. He also lauded the LAF Command and ISF Directorate support for their competent participation in the SMES Exhibition and Conference.

Mr. Riad Kahwaji

Mr. Riad Kahwaji offered thanks to Prime Minister Mikati for patronizing SMES 2011 Exhibition and Conference; he also thanked all of LAF Command and ISF Directorate for their Support.

“The exhibition updates all companies, banks, hotels and factories of the private sector about security solutions to protect their facilities from threats” said Kahwaji stressing that “the SMES exhibition is for Military and Security Institutions as well, with no political implications whatsoever.”

Kahwaji confirmed that “most of the companies that contributed to the event first time in 2009, will be present this year, along with new companies. He particularly mentioned the Lebanese Security Companies syndicate, represented by their president Captain Sami Zod and the Russian Companies represented by Rosoboronexport.

“We are looking forward to watch the Mobile Forces and the ISF Leopards demonstration, the same way as in SMES 2009, because the Lebanese military and security Institutions will have their pavilions to show Lebanese citizens the degree of readiness the government offers to preserve security and protection.” Said Kahwaji

Kahwaji expressed his expectations to see significant local industry security products exhibited this year in the show, to surprise observers with the Lebanese skills and industrial capabilities.

“During the conference that precedes the launch of the SMES exhibition, a group of officials and security leaders will address subjects related to dangers for social living and ways to face them.” Said Kahwaji
